

IN BRIEF

Free Liver Health Check-up Camp inaugurated

Delhi Health Minister Dr Pankaj Kumar Singh on Tuesday inaugurated a free liver health check-up camp at his camp office in Kanwar Singh Nagar, Vikaspuri. The camp will run from September 9 to 13, 2025, and the registration for the free health check-up will be done between 10:00 am and 12:00 noon.

The camp is being organised by the Institute of Liver and Biliary Sciences (ILBS) to provide citizens with a wide range of free health services. These include clinical examinations covering blood pressure, weight, height and waist-hip ratio; blood tests such as liver function tests (LFT), sugar, lipids, complete blood count (CBC) and screening for Hepatitis B and C; fibroscan screening to detect liver fat and fibrosis; specialist consultations with doctors; and diet and nutrition counselling to guide citizens on healthy lifestyle practices.

Sood felicitates contributors to PM POSHAN scheme

Delhi Education Minister Ashish Sood on Tuesday felicitated agency districts, officers and employees for their contributions to the successful implementation of the Pradhan Mantri POSHAN (Mid-day Meal) Scheme.

The awards were presented at an event held at Shaktinagar School, where participants of the first-ever cooking competition were also honoured, according to a statement. In the competition, the first prize was awarded to Akshaya Patra Foundation, the second to Ekta Shakti Foundation, and the third to Stree Shakti.

Officers will be honoured for exemplary performance: CM

In an effort to ensure effective governance to benefit citizens of the national capital, Chief Minister Rekha Gupta on Tuesday announced the launch of an annual awards programme to honour officers and departments delivering exemplary performance in their respective fields. The award categories include Best Engineer, Best Department, Best SDM and Best DM.

She also directed that regular public hearings must be organised in every district to ensure that citizens' grievances are addressed directly by the Chief Minister. She specified that detailed schedules of such hearings should be submitted to the Chief Minister's Office in a timely manner.

She also ordered the early disposal of pending certificates (such as income and caste certificates) and asked officers to suggest reforms in certificate-related policies.

Chairing a high-level meeting with District Magistrates, Sub-Divisional Magistrates, Super-Registrars and other officials of the Revenue Department, Rekha Gupta said they must work with honesty, public interest, and transparency, as the image of the government is determined by their own conduct.

She stated that during the Kanwar Yatra and floods, officials had demonstrated remarkable commitment and set an example, and she expressed hope that such dedicated work would continue in the future as well. The Chief Minister assured the senior officials that she stands firmly with them in their correct decisions.

The review meeting was attended by Chief Secretary Dharmendra, Divisional Commissioner Neeraj Senwal, and other senior officials. The Chief Minister outlined her Government's priorities, stressing that rapid efforts are required to transform the capital into a truly 'Viksit Delhi'.

She emphasised that administrative systems are being strengthened in close coordination with officers. Rekha Gupta praised those who worked round the clock to manage flood emergencies and the Kanwar Yatra, commending in particular the Divisional Commissioner and District Magistrates Chaitanya, Anil Srivastava, G Sudhakar.

Looking ahead, she directed that upcoming public events such as Ramleela and Durga Puja must be managed through a single-window system, similar to the arrangements during the Kanwar Yatra, ensuring that the public faces no inconvenience. The Chief Minister instructed that all necessary permissions be issued in a time-bound manner, and that full responsibility must be taken for security, healthcare, sanitation, and traffic management.

The Chief Minister further stated that there must be zero encroachment on government land in the capital.

Newborn dies after negligence at hospital

ABHINAV KUMAR JHA
■ New Delhi

A 26-week-old baby died Sunday evening after being born in the washroom of a Delhi government-run hospital, allegedly due to a lack of basic medical resources and delay in care.

The mother, a 21-year-old woman identified as Pooja, was reportedly a destitute patient admitted under a court order, raising serious questions about the hospital's handling of vulnerable individuals.

The incident occurred at the Institute of Human Behaviour and Allied Sciences (IHBAS), where Pooja was admitted on September 4 from GTB Hospital. She was 36 weeks pregnant at the time.

According to information confirmed by Dr Preeti, who was in charge of the patient, Pooja began experiencing labour pains around 5 pm on Sunday.

Staff at the hospital allegedly stated that they lacked facilities for childbirth, as it is a psychiatric institution.

Around 5:10 pm, Pooja delivered the baby in a washroom. Both the mother and child were still connected by the umbilical cord and placenta.

A crucial delay followed as the hospital staff struggled to find a clamp to cut the cord, a basic medical instrument. After a significant delay, a clamp was found, and the baby was cut.

The baby, alive at birth, and Pooja were then rushed by ambulance to the nearby Swami Dayanand Hospital. However, the infant, with underdeveloped lungs due to being born prematurely, died at 9:12 pm.

The incident has highlighted what appears to be a systemic failure at Institute of Human Behaviour and Allied Sciences (IHBAS) which is fully funded by Delhi

STAFF AT THE HOSPITAL ALLEGEDLY STATED THAT THEY LACKED FACILITIES FOR CHILDBIRTH, AS IT IS A PSYCHIATRIC INSTITUTION

Government. While Pooja was on medication, including lorazepam, the primary cause for the baby's death seems to be the premature delivery, as per sources in hospital administration. They said that the lungs of the child was not formed well, and there had been a blockage in the delivery canal. But on-ground investigation clearly shows the hospital staff's delivery setup and the delay in care.

Hospital staff confirmed they did not have the necessary facilities for childbirth, even though they had admitted a pregnant patient. They also claimed this was the first such incident. The patient was admitted on a court order, yet the hospital staff stated they had no contact information for her family, a highly unusual circumstance for a medico-legal case.

The person in charge of the Mother and Child Ward, Dr Pratibha Gehlawat, was not immediately available for comment.

Pooja is currently back at GTB Hospital. The tragic death of her baby has prompted calls for an immediate inquiry by human rights and women's commissions, with critics alleging that IHBAS's administration, under its current director Rajinder K Dhamija,

"The case underscores a grave violation of the patient's human rights, raising concerns about the welfare and safety of men and women in institutional care," said Sangeeta Gulati, a women activist.

Hyderabad teen makes top 8 in Miss Teen India 2025

■ New Delhi

A 13-year-old student from Hyderabad, currently enrolled at Army Public School, Dhauka Kuan, has secured a coveted spot among the Top 8 finalists of the 27th Alee Club Miss Teen India 2025.

The pageant is recognised in the Limca Book of Records as India's longest-running teen competition.

Pallavi Sharma, a native of Hyderabad, distinguished herself among participants from across the country with her exceptional communication skills and confident stage presence. She has pursued a passion for the performing arts since childhood. For over eight years, Pallavi has trained in Hindustani classical music and also showcased her versatility by excelling in hip-hop dance and theatre at Triveni Kala Sangam.

Speaking about her achievement, Pallavi expressed her pride. "Reaching the Top 8 is an unforgettable milestone. I am proud to represent my school and my roots in Hyderabad. This platform has given me confidence, learning, and memories that will always stay with me," she said. Pallavi also thanked the Alee Club, her mentors, and her family for their support.

Her journey is being cited as an inspiring example of how a combination of dedication, diverse talent, and eloquence can empower young individuals to shine on a national stage.

Pallavi's success underscores the importance of a holistic approach to education and personal development, beyond traditional academics.

The final results of the pageant are expected to be announced later this month.

Nepali man supplying Indian SIM cards to ISI, held

PIONEER NEWS SERVICE
■ New Delhi

A Nepali national, who was allegedly lured by Pakistani ISI with the promise of a US visa and opportunities in journalism, has been arrested by the Delhi Police for supplying Indian SIM cards to ISI operatives.

The accused, identified as Prabhakar Kumar Chaurasiya (43), a native of Nepal's Birganj, was arrested from east Delhi's Laxmi Nagar area on August 28 following a tip-off, an officer said.

In exchange of the visa and job opportunity, he agreed to supply Indian SIM cards and gather information about sensitive defence establishments such as the DRDO and Army units, the officials said. "Chaurasiya had procured at least 16 SIM cards of private telecom companies using Aadhaar credentials. He sent them to Nepal, from where the SIMs were smuggled further and handed over to ISI operatives," Deputy Commissioner of Police (Special Cell) Amit Kaushik in a statement said.

"Of these, 11 SIMs were found to be in active use on social media (WhatsApp) from Lahore, Bahawalpur and other places in Pakistan," he added. The officer said the SIM cards were being operated by ISI handlers to contact Indian Army personnel and pursue espionage objectives through social media.

The recovery from Chaurasiya included digital devices with incriminating material and multiple SIM card envelopes, he said.

"Based on inputs from secret sources regarding misuse of Indian numbers by Pakistani handlers, a team mounted surveillance in Laxmi Nagar. Chaurasiya was apprehended from Vijay Block on August 28. During interrogation, he disclosed that he was lured by ISI operatives with the promise of a US visa and opportunities in journalism abroad," the DCP said.

According to police, Chaurasiya, a citizen of Nepal, pursued studies in Nepal and Bihar. He later obtained a BSc degree in Information Technology and a diploma in computer hardware and networking. Professionally, he worked in the pharmaceutical sector across Maharashtra and Delhi as a medical representative and as a sales manager.

"In 2017, he floated a logistics company in Kathmandu, but it collapsed due to losses, pushing him into financial distress. In 2018, he came in contact with ISI operatives through a Nepali intermediary in 2024. Out of desperation to settle abroad, he started supplying SIM cards and agreed to attempt collection of defence-related information," DCP Kaushik said.

The police said a case has been registered under sections 61(2)(criminal conspiracy) and 125 (acts endangering sovereignty, unity and integrity of India) of the Bharatiya Nyaya Sanhita at the Special Cell Police Station.

Further investigation is underway to identify Chaurasiya's associates, trace the courier network and apprehend the handlers involved.

Forest dept to remove camera, cage from JNU if no leopard signs found

PIONEER NEWS SERVICE
■ New Delhi

The Forest Department will monitor the Jawahar Nehru University (JNU) area for a week, and the camera and cage will be removed if no further signs of the animal are detected during this period. Following a complaint about leopard sighting on Friday, the Forest Department conducted a search operation on Saturday after receiving the call, but no evidence of leopard movement was found.

Subsequently, on Sunday, the department installed four cameras and a cage at JNU to keep a close watch. A forest official said the department will continue monitoring the area, and if no further signs of the animal are detected during this period (a week), the equipment will be removed as a precautionary measure. "Only one person has complained of seeing the leopard; and so far, there is no evidence, not even animal footprints, he said.

A search operation was conducted on Saturday after receiving the call but no evidence of leopard movement was found. The department installed the camera and cage, and will monitor the situation for one week.

"If no further signs of the animal are detected during this period, the equipment will be removed as a precautionary measure," the official said.

The JNU, in its statement on Saturday, said, "Forest officials have not confirmed the presence of a leopard in the area. They have gone back after spot verification." The same day, university authorities issued an advisory to residents after a member from Kaveri Hostel claimed to have spotted the animal. Students were asked to remain indoors, move in groups, keep doors with windows shut, and remain vigilant, especially around the Jhelum Hostel, Old Transit House, and the Stadium area.

FIVE INJURED AFTER AC COMPRESSOR EXPLODED

PIONEER NEWS SERVICE
■ New Delhi

Five people, including three employees of a pizza parlour, sustained minor injuries after an air-conditioner compressor exploded in northeast Delhi's Yamuna Vihar. The incident took place on Monday at a Pizza Hut outlet, where a fire broke out following the compressor blast, police said in a statement. Five people, including three employees of the outlet, suffered injuries in the incident, they said.

However, Pizza Hut India denied that the fire took place inside the outlet. "We are unable to clarify that Monday's unfortunate fire did not occur inside the Pizza Hut Yamuna Vihar restaurant. It broke out in the main building compound outside the outlet and authorities are investigating the root cause," it said in a statement.
